PREFACE.

It has been thought advisable to print as appendixes to each Annual Report such useful and interesting Indexes as are too small for separate publication.

The present volume contains four of these :—The first is a full account of the literature connected with the much debated question relating to marriage between near kin, by Mr. Alfred H. Huth, one of the chief authorities on the subject, whose “Marriage of Near Kin, considered with respect to the Law of Nations, the Results of Experience and the Teachings of Biology,” 1875, and article in the Westminster Review on “Cross Fertilization of Plants and Consanguineous Marriage,” have helped to enlarge this literature.

The second consists of a remarkable list of the styles and titles of English sovereigns, arranged, 1. under the titles, 2. chronologically under the names of the sovereign; which we owe to the learning of Mr. De Gray Birch.

The third contains Indexes of Portraits in the “European Magazine,” “London Magazine,” and “Register of the Times,” by Mr. Solly. These will form a useful contribution towards a general Index of British Portraits, and it is intended to follow them up in future years with Indexes of Portraits in the "Universal," "Literary," and "Gentleman's" magazines, etc.

Mr. Solly writes: "Besides Journals, there are many other books which contain portraits, where you would not expect to find them; e.g. Lettsom's "Hints on Beneficence," 1801, has heads of Rumford, Dr. Haygarth, T. Bernard, W. Blizard, J. Ware, J. Nichols, J. Howard, Dr. Dale, Dr. Hawes, Dr. Cozens, Dr. Fothergill, Dr. Jenner, Dr. Woodville, Dr. Pearson, Dr. Sims, Dr. Hulme, etc., etc. Some, as that of Dr. Sims, are excellent."

It will probably be found expedient to include in the scheme such works as Lodge's "Portraits," and Pettigrew's Memoirs of Physicians, Surgeons, etc.

The fourth is an Index of Obituary Notices for 1878. This is a first attempt, and the Council hope to be able to make the Index for 1879 considerably fuller than this one.

THE INDEX SOCIETY.

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

MARCH, 1879.

At the end of the first year of the Index Society's existence, the General Committee desire to report to the Members on their proceedings, and to review the steps that have been taken to plan out and arrange the work of the future.

They congratulate the Members upon the hearty manner with which the Society has been welcomed upon all sides. From correspondence received it appears that the need of some such organization has long been keenly felt by many. However, to carry out the objects aimed at in a satisfactory manner, a greatly increased subscription list must be obtained. The Committee therefore urge upon the Members, who have proved themselves deeply interested in the success of the undertaking, the necessity of obtaining a large accession of new subscribers, and it is hoped that the programme now offered will help them in their endeavours.

Various circumstances (which it is needless to particularise here) have caused the delay in the issue of the books for the year 1878, but when they are in the Members' hands, the Committee hope they will give satisfaction.

The first three publications are as follows:—

I. "What is an Index?" by the Honorary Secretary, which forms a sort of manifesto of the Society's aims and objects. To it have been added the "Rules for Indexing," which were drawn up as a help towards obtaining uniformity in the publications of the Society. This was published in a preliminary form early in September last, but has been reprinted with an index, omitted in the first issue in order to expedite early publication.

II. "Index of the Names of the Royalists whose Estates were Confiscated during the Commonwealth," compiled by Miss Mabel Peacock.

It is believed that this will be of considerable value to the historian. Thomas Dring's "Catalogue of the Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen who have Compounded for their Estates," 1655, is known to be a very careless production, and a proposal was therefore made to the Committee to issue a new and complete Index to the Royalist Composition Papers. Inquiries were made at the Public Record Office concerning the MS. Index to these papers in the Literary Search Room, which were most courteously answered. It appears that a Calendar of the Papers is about to be prepared by Mrs. Everett Green, to which an index of a more accurate and comprehensive character than the manuscript one now in use will be added. Under these circumstances it was out of the question for the Society to think further of the matter. Mr. Peacock thereupon pointed out the value of the three Confiscation Acts of 1651 and 1652 included in Scobell's "Acts and Ordinances," which were little known to historians, and Miss Peacock undertook to produce an index to them. As Scobell's work is probably out of the reach of most of the Members, the Acts themselves have been reprinted. This work will be an indispensable adjunct to the forthcoming Calendar.

III. "Index of Municipal Offices," by G. Laurence Gomme.

Mr. Gomme has indexed the names of the offices referred to in the First Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Municipal Corporations in England and Wales, 1835, and added a valuable introduction on the historical bearing of these names, which contains a mass of useful information not attainable elsewhere. Many of these offices have fallen into desuetude, and knowledge of them would oftentimes have been lost had they not been recorded by the Commissioners. Some of them serve to throw light upon a very primitive state of society.

It is hoped that the funds will be sufficient to allow of the issue of "A Handbook to the Literature of Botany" as the fourth publication for the 1878 subscription. This has been unavoidably delayed by the indisposition of the compiler, Mr. Daydon Jackson.

The publications are printed in an octavo form, on a small quarto paper, of the same size as the Camden Society's books, in order to allow a good margin for MS. notes and additions. It has also been thought advisable to issue the books in a handsome cloth cover, so that they can be placed by members upon their shelves without the delay or cost of binding. Mr. John Fenton has obliged his fellow-members by designing two devices—one of a student seeking for information at the index post, which points to the three roads of Science, Literature, and Art, for the title-page; and another, of an open book with index leaves, for the sides of the cover of the various publications.

The work before the Society is vast, but during the various meetings held by the Committee the best means of cultivating the field has become more clearly defined. In the Prospectus the work was divided under the three heads:—

1. Indexes to Standard Works.
2. Subject Indexes of Science, Literature, and Art.
3. General Reference Index.

I. Specially valuable works which are not likely to be superseded will be indexed separately, and some of those mentioned in the list given in the prospectus have been put in hand, but in many instances it will be more satisfactory to make indexes to the whole of an author's works on one subject, or to two or more books on the same subject, rather than to single books.

II. These will be of two kinds—1. Surveys of the literature of a large subject, with special reference to the most valuable books and articles, and particularly to those which have been era-marking. 2. Full bibliographies of small divisions of large subjects.

III. The preparation of the General Index and the occupation of an office are still in abeyance for want of funds, but the great advantage of carrying these objects into practice has never been lost sight of by the Committee.

The Committee feel that at this early stage of the Society's existence it is difficult to please all tastes, and they fear that Science is not so well represented in their programme as they could wish. Several of the members are interested in astronomical history, and it is hoped that some Indexes in this department will be announced shortly. An Index of Anthropology has also been proposed, but is not yet put in hand. Biography, dealing as it does with all classes of the community, will be interesting both to scientific and literary men, and the Committee therefore think that they cannot do better than make this a special feature in their future plans. A Biographia Britannica is still a desideratum, and it will be well if the Society can aid in the work by the arrangement and registration of materials. The Rev. Professor Mayor, whose biographical collections are most extensive, has kindly offered the Society a large number of slips containing biographical references, which, with a catalogue of the titles of separate memoirs and of the contents of certain well-known collections, will form a useful nucleus for an English Biographical Index. It is proposed to add references to Funeral sermons, which often contain curious biographical matter not elsewhere to be found.

The following is a list of the works in hand :—

- Index of British Existing, Dormant and Extinct Hereditary Titles of Honour, by E. Solly, F.R.S.
- to the chief Household Books, by W. Payne.
- of English Topography, by R. Harrison.
- of the Biography of Topographical Writers.
- of English Roman Catholic Priests (from Eliz. to James II.), by the Rev. Thomas G. Law.
- of Local Engravings, arranged according to Counties, by the Rev. Chancellor Parish.
- of Painted Portraits of British Worthies, by H. B. Wheatley.
- of Works on Horses, by Capt. Huth.

Indexes to particular Books.

Dugdale's Warwickshire, by Thomas Jesson.

Hutchins's Dorset, by Rev. W. Kendall.

Kemble's Saxons in England, by G. L. Gomme.

Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, by J. E. Bailey.

Mr. Chappell offers an Index of the Pepysian Collection of Ballads.

Mr. Peacock proposes to compile from the Official Calendar an Index of such natives of countries in which English is spoken as have matriculated at the University of Leyden; and to reprint the excessively rare list of those who subscribed to the defence of the country against the Spanish Armada; the Lists of the Justices of the Peace printed in 1650 and 1660; and the List of Royalists who claimed the compensation voted by Parliament after the Restoration.

Prof. Jevons hopes ultimately to prepare a Handbook to the Literature of Political Economy.

One of the first series to be placed upon the list of books for indexing was the Gentleman's Magazine, and the question of putting it in hand has been frequently before the Committee. When, therefore, one of the Members made a donation of one hundred guineas to the general funds of the Society, it was thought that this Index should be at once undertaken. The first intention was to continue the existing Indexes, but when it was decided that the Biographical portion of the work should be indexed first, it became clear that the whole must be done afresh, as the old Index of Names is so badly arranged as to be almost useless for purposes of reference. Calculations were now made regarding the extent of an Index to the Biographical and Obituary Notices in the entire series of the Gentleman's Magazine, and the result showed that the undertaking was a much more formidable one than had been anticipated. It was found that in the total 223 volumes extending over 138 years there could not be less than 340,000 separate entries. If printed in double columns, these would occupy at least eight volumes of 600 or 700 pages each, costing for printing alone between £2000 and £3000. In the earlier volumes the obituary notices are very short, and in many cases nothing more than the date of death is given. If only those entries which contained a biographical fact of some kind were indexed, the whole might be got into four volumes of the same size.

There seems to be so great an objection to the adoption of any system of selection, that the Committee are unable to agree to the smaller estimate, and with the present funds they do not feel justified in undertaking the larger scheme. Under these circumstances, they think it best to bring the matter before a general meeting of the members. Mr. Fenton has promised to undertake the superintendence of this vast work should the Society think it prudent to make a beginning upon it. There can be no doubt that the projected Index would be of the greatest utility to a large number of persons, and the Committee would request the assistance towards its production of those who can afford to start a guarantee fund for the purpose. A specimen of the plan proposed for the Index is added to this report, see pp. 19-20.

Mr. Peacock has proposed the preparation of a complete Index to the plates in the entire series, which might be contained in a small volume, and yet be of considerable value.

One of the members of the Committee urged the compilation of an index to the German scientific journal entitled Isis, edited by the celebrated Lorenz Oken from 1817 to 1848, a periodical containing articles by the best German physicists, chemists, biologists and psychologists of that period, and therefore abounding in valuable information of almost every kind, but comparatively little known in England, though frequently needed for consultation by investigators of the present day. The question, however, of the advisability of indexing foreign works has been postponed for further discussion.

When the Society was first started, the Committee received communications from several workers who had made considerable collections for general and special indexes. The chief of these were Messrs. Gostwick, Parker Snow, and Ramsay. Mr. Ramsay has a remarkable series of abstracted notes relating to the Natural History Sciences. Below is the compiler's own account of his plan.¹

¹ Notice of "A Plan of Systematized Notes," by A. RAMSAY.—A brief reference may be made to a plan for systematizing facts, as the arrangement adopted would

The Committee desire to welcome all labourers in the field, and they therefore hope to be able to record such index work as may be projected outside their own sphere.¹

Of the first importance are the various official undertakings of this character; and special attention may be drawn to the work of the Statute Law Commissioners. Some papers relative to their proceedings were printed last year by order of the House of Commons, which contain specimen Tables of Acts on Treason, Piracy, Riot, etc., showing the history of each subject in a very clear manner.

In the United States, an immense work is now under consideration by a Committee of Congress, viz. a General Index of the Journals of Congress from the organization of the Government to the present time. Mr. Albert Ordway, under whose superintendence the work is to be prepared, has drawn up a serve all the purposes for which an index is useful. An index is a valuable adjunct to a book, and the systematized arrangement of the facts in that book would also be useful for purposes of reference. The object of the plan is to analyse and systematize the contents of all books on some general principles. It may be urged that such a task is impossible in its entirety; this may be true. But if the systematized arrangement of the contents of any one book is of use, the application of the same idea to many books would be of far greater utility; and so far as it goes the work would have a definite completeness. The same remark would apply to a general index to a number of specified works. The plan under notice has been gradually developed, and has been practically applied to most of the natural history sciences. The formation of the plan necessarily involves a consideration as to which is the best method of classification. The method adopted is to consider things as the primary objects to be classified. The properties, parts, and distribution of the things constitute the subordinate headings. These are arranged as uniformly as is practicable, so as to allow of the regrouping of the materials should it be considered preferable to make the properties and distributional areas the primary objects to be classified. Each great group of things is separately treated and arranged. In each group the arrangement of headings is mainly systematic, the alphabetical order only being resorted to for the purpose of facilitating reference. As a rule the order is from the general to the particular; and as each group is separate, the groups may be arranged so as to refer from the more simple to the more complex, or vice versa. In the latter case "animals" would come first, being the highest kind of things. This is zoology, but it is made to embrace physiology, or the functions of animals, and all other "ologies" which have animals for their subject matter. As this is a very extensive branch of knowledge, each class has its own systematic and alphabetical arrangement of data. As far as possible the same arrangement is adopted for each class, so as to facilitate the finding and comparison of statements. Man, however, is an exception, and is treated separately, while the subject matter is more minutely divided than in the classes. Plants, rocks, minerals, strata, climate, and physical geography have each their own special arrangements. Mathematics and the exact sciences are omitted, while physics and chemistry find a place only so far as they specially concern the different kind of things noticed under the subordinate headings of chemical and physical properties.

valuable report, with a carefully arranged specimen of the Index, which was printed at Washington in January, 1879.

The preparation, under the auspices of the Camden Society, of a complete Index to their various publications, needs to be recorded with cordial appreciation of the promised boon. This is in the hands of Mr. Gough, who compiled the admirable Index to the Parker Society Publications. Another Index which will be eagerly welcomed by all literary men, is one to the whole series of the Archæologia, the production of which has been confided to our member Mr. Peacock. The first number of a much required periodical Index has just been published at Manchester called Hildebrandt's Science Index.¹

A Member of the Society² has for some time been engaged in the preparation of an alphabetical Index of the names of all persons who are incidentally mentioned in the various Genealogical Dictionaries³ published by Sir Bernard Burke as having married members of the families whose pedigrees he records, but who are not themselves so recorded. Opposite each entry is given the date or approximate date of marriage, the name of the person married, and a reference to the pedigree in which the marriage is recorded. The Index contains about 90,000 names, and will form a volume somewhat smaller than Burke's Peerage.

Under each name will also be given a catalogue of all the pedigrees of families of that name, that are to be found in the Genealogical Dictionaries referred to.

The Index will thus afford a very complete guide to all the information that is to be found about different names and families in Sir Bernard Burke's works. Care has, however, been taken to avoid the inclusion of fabulous and fictitious alliances and pedigrees, such as in some of Burke's works have given cause for well-deserved criticism. As a rule all marriages dating from the year 1600 to the year 1875, that come within the scope of the Index, are entered ; but the rule has not been used for the exclusion of marriages of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries when these are recorded in authentic and trustworthy pedigrees. It is believed that the Index, when completed, will be useful to all interested in genealogical inquiries or in the preparation of family histories (see p. 21).

¹ "We have received from the publisher, 55, Cross Street, Manchester, a prospectus of Hildebrandt's Technological Index, which is to be published monthly, by subscription, and is intended to contain all the material requisite for easy reference to all articles of scientific or technical interest which have appeared in the interval. It will consist of alphabetical lists of titles, contents, and authors (if known) of the articles appearing in the periodicals, together with the name, page, etc., of the latter, and this will be rendered more complete and useful by a brief statement (not exceeding a line or two) of their salient points."—Academy, Jan. 11, 1879, p. 28.

The first MS. copy of the Index has been finished, and half of the work of re-copying and revising the fair copy has been completed. A work of this nature cannot be printed and published unless the sale of a large impression is assured beforehand.

Mr. Peacock has been engaged for several years on an elaborate Civil War Index. His object has been the gathering together of a list of all persons engaged in any public capacity, military, ecclesiastical, or civil, during the Civil War of the seventeenth century, that is, roughly speaking, from 1639 to 1660. A great part of the printed collections for the time, such as Acts of Parliament, Letters, Diaries, Memoirs, etc., some of them in several volumes folio, have been gone through, and the references at present amount to many thousands. They are arranged up to the end of O, but additions have still to be inserted. It is believed that no such exhaustive an index has ever been undertaken for any special historical period, and the extreme utility of such a work is self-evident.

Mr. De Gray Birch and Mr. H. Jenner have published a work entitled "Early Drawings and Illuminations: an Introduction to the Study of Illustrated Manuscripts," which formed an exceedingly useful Index to the drawings in the Manuscript Department of the British Museum.

We are continually receiving news from the United States which prove the active interest there taken in Bibliographical Studies. Prof. Justin Winsor has started a series of bibliographical monographs, in connexion with Harvard College, in which Mr. Holden's Index Catalogue of Publications on the Transits of Mercury has been published ; but the most noteworthy event is the publication of an "Index Medicus or Monthly Classified Record of the Current Medical Literature of the World," by Dr. John S. Billings and Robert Fletcher, the first number of which was published by Leypoldt of New York in January, 1879.

There have long been complaints from the few against the publication of books of fact without indexes, and this outcry is gradually growing louder. A distinguished member of this Society makes it a rule to refuse the purchase for his library of any book, however important, that is published without an index. It has been suggested that the Committee should gibbet in their Reports all indexless books, but it will perhaps be better to adopt a reverse process, and to commend those books which are well indexed.

The Committee wish to give, as a not unimportant feature of the annual report, particulars of Indexes to Special Subjects, the compilation of which would require the co-operation of the members of the Society and the superintendence of editors specially interested in certain subjects. By this division of labour collections of most valuable materials may be brought together, which otherwise would scarcely be accomplished. The Committee invite suggestions and offers for this section of the Society's labours. One Index of this description is in course of preparation, namely, An Index of Places where Roman Remains have been found in Great Britain, to be edited by Mr. G. L. Gomme. The great number of books to be referred to in order to make such an Index as complete as it should be, requires the assistance of all members who are interested in this subject, and they are requested to send to Mr. Gomme any collections which should be incorporated in the Index. The chief sources of information are the Transactions of Archæological Societies. Mr. Gomme has in hand The Journal of the British Archæological Association, and The Journal of the Archæological Institute. Specimens of the proposed Index are subjoined.

BARNES (in the Thames at), bronze figure of Atys, Archæologia, xxviii. 40.

BISLEY (adjoining the highway from Oakbridge Common), vestiges of buildings and 1223 coins, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 44.

CASTOR, NEAR PETERBOROUGH, potters' kilns extending twenty miles, Journ. Brit. Ass. i. 1-9.

- CLARENDON WOOD, NEAR SALISBURY, coins, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 57, 62.
- COLCHESTER (opposite the Castle), remains of Roman walls, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 53.
- DRAYTON, pavement, coins, Beesley's Hist. of Banbury, 44.
- DYMCHURCH, 200 urns and vessels, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 40-42.
- FARNHAM, Pavement, Gent. Mag. lxxxvii. (part 2), 174.
- GRETWORTH, urns, Beesley's Hist. of Banbury, 32.
- HIGH WYCOMBE, pavement, Gent. Mag. lxxxvii. (part 2), p. 551.
- LONDON (Old Fish Street Hill), foundations of buildings, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 45.
- (Royal Exchange and Finch Lane, between), pavement, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 64.
- MADELEY HEATH, urns, copper coins, Gent. Mag. lxxxvii. (part 1), 464.
- NORTHILL, three vases, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 52.
- OTMOOR, traces of Roman road and fragments of pottery, Gent. Mag. lxxxvii. (part 1), 311.
- PADSTOW, inscribed slab of granite, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 49.
- SLACK, remains of a station, Yorks Arch. and Top. Journ. i. 1-12, 86-88.
- WORCESTER (High Street), small female figure and coins, Journ. Brit. Arch. Ass. i. 48.

Many of the old journals of the last century contain engraved portraits of celebrities which are not elsewhere to be obtained, and a complete index of these would therefore be of great use. Mr. Solly has prepared indexes to the portraits in the Register of the Times, 1794-5, and the London Magazine, 1747-1781, which will be printed in the Appendix to this Report. The Committee will be glad to print other lists of the same kind in future Reports, and request those who are willing to assist to let them know what Magazines they are willing to undertake.

It is proposed to add to this Report when it is put into a permanent form the following, besides the Index of Portraits mentioned above:—

- An Index to Books and Papers on Marriage between Near Kin, by Alfred H. Huth.
- An Index of the Styles and Titles of English Sovereigns, by Walter De Gray Birch.
- An Index of Obituary Notices for 1878.

Many short and tentative indexes may in this way find an appropriate place in the appendixes to the annual reports.

In conclusion the Committee have the pleasing duty of publicly thanking all those who have helped them in their endeavours to further the objects of the Society. Without the assistance of those who have worked and are now working upon indexes for publication, nothing could have been done; but still more volunteers are required, so that plenty of material may be put in hand; the present funds being absorbed by paper and print.

The Committee are desirous of collecting a Library of Indexes for the use of the members when an office is obtained, and while thanking the donors of the following presents, they venture to express the hope that they may be able to print many lists of the same character in the future.

General Index to the Transactions of the Pathological Society of London for vols. 16 to 25, 1865-74. 8vo. London, 1875.

General Index to the first fifteen volumes of the Journal of the Statistical Society of London. 8vo. London, 1854.

By the Compiler (Mr. Benj. R. Wheatley).

Index to the Catalogue of the Manuscripts of Elias Ashmole, formerly preserved in the Ashmolean Museum, and now deposited in the Bodleian Library, Oxford. 4to. Oxford, 1866.

Index to the Catalogue of the Rawlinson MSS. 4to. London, 1878.

By the Compiler (Rev. W. D. Macray).

Index to the Sanitary Record (volumes 1 to 8). 4to. London, 1874-78.

By the Compiler (Mr. W. T. Marchant).

Pocket Index to Oke and Stone. By an Essex Justice. 12mo. Gloucester, 1877. By the Compiler (Mr. Andrew Johnston).

The Council of the Society of Arts, at the instance of their late Secretary (Mr. Le Neve Foster), who was also a member of our Committee, have been pleased to allow the Committee to hold their meetings in the rooms in the Adelphi. The Committee feel sure that the members will join them in thanking the Society of Arts very heartily for this favour. They wish at the same time to express their sense of the loss they have sustained in the death of Mr. Foster, who was amongst the first to come forward in support of the new Society. They also desire to thank the Committee of the London Library, who granted them a room for meeting at an early stage of their existence.

The funds of the Society have been very considerably augmented by the handsome donation of one hundred guineas from a member who does not wish his name published, in testimony of his interest in the Society's work. The presentation was made through the hands of Mr. Harrison. Such a tribute to the importance of the work before them is particularly acceptable at the commencement of the Society's existence when the subscriptions are few, and the members will doubtless agree with the Committee in publicly expressing thanks to the munificent donor.

Notices of some of the proceedings of the Committee have appeared in the Athenæum and the Academy, and rather fuller reports in the Library Journal, the editors of which have expressed the liveliest interest in the objects of the Society, and a desire to give such aid in bringing them under the notice of the American public as is in their power.

The Committee trust that thus the list of American subscribers may be largely increased, and they invite suggestions as to the Indexes that are likely to be most acceptable to such subscribers.

The above Report, and the accompanying Cash Account, were adopted at the First Annual Meeting, held on Wednesday, March 26, 1879. Since the meeting the Council have received (through Mr. H. Wagner, F.S.A.) the gratifying intelligence that the Baroness Burdett Coutts has presented the Society with a donation of £20, and that her ladyship has further expressed her desire of becoming a member.

HENRY B. WHEATLEY, Hon. Sec.

The following Rules were passed at the First Annual Meeting, held on Wednesday, March 26th, 1879.

- I. The Index Society has for its objects the preparation of Indexes to Standard Works and Special Subjects; and the accumulation of materials for a General Reference Index.
- II. The Society shall consist of Members subscribing one guinea annually, payable in advance on the 1st of January of each year.
- III. The names of those wishing to become Members shall be submitted to the Council for approval.
- IV. A Member of the Society may at any time compound for all future subscriptions by payment of fifteen guineas.
- V. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be held in London at such time and place as the Council shall from time to time appoint.
- VI. The affairs of the Society shall be conducted by a Council consisting of a President, four Vice-Presidents, Treasurer, Director and Secretary, and sixteen Ordinary Members. The Council shall have power to fill up occasional vacancies in their number.
- VII. At each Annual Meeting all the Members of the Council shall retire from office, but not more than three-fourths shall be eligible for re-election.
- VIII. The accounts of the receipts and expenditure of the Society shall be audited annually by two auditors appointed by the Council.
- IX. Every Member (whose subscription shall not be in arrear) shall be entitled to a copy of each of the Ordinary Works published by the Society for the current year.
- X. No alteration shall be made in these Rules except at an Annual Meeting or at a Special General Meeting called upon the requisition of at least five Members. One month's previous notice of the change to be proposed shall be given in writing to the Secretary, and the alteration proposed must be approved by at least three-fourths of the Members present at such Meeting.

The First Annual Meeting of the Index Society was held on Wednesday, March 26, 1879, at the Rooms of the Royal Asiatic Society, 22 Albemarle Street, at 5·30 P.M.

The Earl of CARNARVON, President, in the Chair. The SECRETARY read the Report of the Committee (in part) and the balance-sheet.

The PRESIDENT then moved the adoption of the Report in an animated address, full of valuable suggestion. He thought that in a literary point of view this was an important meeting. They had to make their way, but he was satisfied the object they had in view, when once understood by the public, would be quite sufficient to recommend its usefulness. The field of knowledge was a very large one. Like the Garden of Eden, the tree of knowledge of good and evil grew within its precincts; the fruits of the tree were many and various—some growing on the top, some on the boughs, some close to the ground, some very accessible, and some very difficult to obtain; and every student knew that it was not enough to have knowledge within sight, but it was necessary also that it should be within reach. It was important that the knowledge men possessed should be accessible, docketed, pigeon-holed—in fact, ready for use. That he took to be the object which the meeting had set before itself. He apprehended that every student had in his own way indexed the books he was studying, and this Society undertook to do that for the whole student world which each student had to do for himself. Countless authorities might be cited as to the worth of a good index in enhancing the value and usefulness of a good book; nor was it necessary to remind such an audience of what Mr. Carlyle had said on the subject, and of Lord Macaulay's emphatic testimony at the early age of fifteen. Amongst living authorities, they had an admirable example set in the legal profession, both by Sir Henry Thring and Sir Fitzjames Stephen, who had pronounced in favour of the principle of indexing. He would himself cite as a homely illustration of the subject the predilection felt by so many scholars for the old Delphin edition of the classics, in spite of all its faults, on account of its copious indexes. Though a good deal had been done, he apprehended the deficiencies in indexing on a comprehensive and systematic scale were simply enormous, and that there had been only just enough done to beacon the road and show how much remained undone. Many important works had indexes compiled on confessedly irregular principles, some upon a totally erroneous rule, some where the index had been so carelessly put together that it was full of glaring absurdities, and some had no index at all. Blomefield's "History of Norfolk," in eleven volumes, had originally no index, and some sixty years after the publication it was found necessary to publish one, at two guineas and a half, which sum had to be paid to make good that which ought never to have needed such an addition. Valuable as was the aid given at that magnificent institution the British Museum, a student might often waste hours and even days in discovering what, if there were an accurate index, he would obtain in a few minutes. It was for the purpose of remedying and providing against such deficiencies, and even evils, that this Society had been established. The movement had sprung out of a letter addressed to the Athenæum by Mr. Harrison, of the London Library, which had been warmly responded to from across the Atlantic by Professor Justin Winsor, the Librarian of Harvard. The Society needed three things—zealous workers, money, and a local habitation. He believed that each one of these objects would tend to help the other, for the zealous workers would bring money, and money would ultimately give them a home and local centre of action. In concluding his address, Lord Carnarvon said: "Gentlemen, I have felt it both a pleasure and an honour to preside at this your first meeting; and all the more so that our meeting should be held in the Hall of the Royal Asiatic Society—a Society which has done so much good service in the highest departments of literature—and I may venture to hope that the young Society which we have this evening inaugurated—I may say planted—will, like a young sapling, spread, and grow, and flourish, and hereafter, like the Banyan-tree of the East, throw down new stems, and put forth new branches, till it forms a grove and a very forest of leaves, flowers, and fruit, under the shelter of which the literary men of all countries, and of every occupation, may come together for mutual information and assistance."

Mr. R. HARRISON seconded the motion, and drew especial attention to the proposed Index to the Biographical and Obituary Notices in the Gentleman's Magazine, which could not be undertaken without a sufficient guarantee fund being obtained.

It was proposed by Mr. PEACOCK, and seconded by Mr. H. S. ASHBEE, "That the thanks of the meeting be given to the Auditors of the Hon. Secretary's cash account."

It was proposed by Mr. SOLLY, and seconded by Mr. GOMME, "That the proposed Rules (see p. 15) be adopted."

It was moved by the PRESIDENT, "That the Officers and Council for the ensuing year be elected."

President.—The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, P.S.A.

Vice-Presidents.—The Lord Lindsay, M.P., V.P.R.S.; Robert Harrison; Sir Henry Thring, K.C.B.; William J. Thoms, F.S.A.

Treasurer.—Edward Solly, F.R.S.

Director and Secretary.—Henry B. Wheatley, F.S.A.

Edmund W. Ashbee, F.S.A.; Walter De Gray Birch, M.R.S.L.; Henry Campkin, F.S.A.; William Chappell, F.S.A.; Colonel Chester, LL.D.; G. Laurence Gomme, F.S.A.; Robert E. Graves; Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.; Alfred Kingston; Rev. W. D. Macray, F.S.A.; Rev. Prof. Mayor; Prof. Newton, F.R.S.; Edward Peacock, F.S.A.; E. C. Rye, F.G.S.; Rev. Prof. Skeat; Ernest C. Thomas.

It was proposed by the Rev. R. HARLEY, and seconded by Mr. KNOBEL, "That the thanks of the meeting be presented to Mr. Vaux, and the Royal Asiatic Society, for the privilege of meeting in their rooms."

It was proposed by Mr. HARRISON, and seconded by Mr. CHAPPELL, "That the thanks of the meeting be given to Mr. Henry Wheatley in consideration of the work done by him for the Society as Hon. Secretary."

The foregoing resolutions were all carried unanimously.

It was proposed by Mr. ASHTON CROSS, and seconded by Mr. CHAPPELL, "That this meeting desires to express its best thanks to the Earl of Carnarvon for presiding at this the first general meeting of the Society." [Carried by acclamation.]

The CHAIRMAN, in reply, closed the proceedings with the remark that he hoped ensuing generations would thank them for the work they had inaugurated this day.

Specimen of Proposed Index to the Biographical and Obituary Notices of the Gentleman's Magazine.

The following entries have been extracted from vol. lxxx. of the Gentleman's Magazine, containing the numbers for January to June (inclusive), 1810. The aggregate of entries in the volume is, in round numbers, 2220.

Each entry is made under the individual's surname, followed by his Christian name and personal titles or designations. After these the territorial designation of the family, whenever mentioned in the Magazine, has been added to facilitate identification. Next follow the dates of birth and death, whenever given absolutely. Where two dates are separated by a hyphen, the first is that of birth, the second that of death. Where one date only is given, it is invariably the date of death. The last three columns contain the reference under, (a) the year of entry, (β) the Part of the Magazine for that year, (γ) the page in that Part.

Entries under the heading of "—— family" refer to paragraphs containing genealogical information which relates to the Family, but cannot be conveniently indexed under the names of individuals. Thus the entries under Marreis; Mears; Morres Family, refer to communications relative to the connexion of the Morres Family with the other Families above mentioned.

On the other hand, where several members of one family are indexed separately, it is understood that the information under each entry is complete in itself. In the case, for instance, of the Burgoyne Family, the monumental inscription of each individual is reproduced verbatim on the page referred to.

An asterisk is prefixed to such entries as refer to full memoirs or essays; and c stands for "circa."

Explanation.

² B.P., B.E.P., and B.E.B. refer to the Peerage, the Extinct Peerage, and the Extinct Baronetage, respectively.

³ Words or initials in parenthesis in the last column are the names of seats.

⁴ This figure (1) in parenthesis indicates that Miss P. C. was married more than once, and that R. A. was her first husband.

⁵ The letters B.H.C. in the last column show that the Pedigree is to be found in the History of the Commoners, and the figure 4 shows that it is to be found in one of the first four editions of the History of the Landed Gentry, and not in the fifth edition, which has been generally used in compiling this index. (See Bridger's Index, p. 178.)

⁶ Italics indicate an extinct title.

For an account of this Index see ante, p. 8.

2.—INDEX OF THE STYLES AND TITLES OF SOVEREIGNS
OF ENGLAND. By WALTER DE GRAY BIRCH, F.R.S.L.

A SIMPLE list of the styles and titles used by the earliest as well as the mediæval and later sovereigns of our island empire is of great use to the historian, and at the request of the Council of the Index Society I have revised my collections, the greater portion of which were originally printed in the Athenæum, Nos. 2528, pp. 497–499, 8 April, and 2530, pp. 566, 567, 22 April, 1876.

The books which I have used in my researches into this interesting subject are such as are easily available to every ordinary student of history, and will be found in every library of antiquarian worth or pretension. They comprise the celebrated ‘Codex Diplomaticus Aevi Saxonici,’ by J. M. Kemble, published in 1839, for the English Historical Society; B. Thorpe’s ‘Diplomatarium Anglicum Aevi Saxonici,’ 1865; some of the Master of the Rolls’ Series of Chronicles and Memorials; the four parts, forming a complete series of Facsimiles of Ancient Charters, published in 1873–1879, for the Trustees of the British Museum; my own ‘Fasti Monastici Aevi Saxonici,’ and several other kindred works. In order not to encroach too much upon space, I have avoided giving references except in the more important instances.

All the sovereigns of England, from the commencement of the seventh century, when the heptanomy of England was in its full vigour, down to Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, appear to have employed the word rex or regina, as the case may be, without exception. And as we may take this for granted, or if necessary prove it without difficulty, by the most cursory examination of the most common collections of royal acts and documents running in the royal name, I have omitted to give any special attention to the use of this specific title, in its simple and uncombined form, by any particular sovereign.

There are, however, a number of words, derived from native or imported sources, which have been employed by these sovereigns from time to time in their royal styles and diplomatic titles, to signify the extent of their power and the nature of their supreme domination over the people or peoples subject to their rule. Many of these terms are of a very interesting kind, and it is to these that I would call the attention of my readers.

I do not propose to investigate the intricacies of the synonymous phrases adjoined to the title, which, starting with the simple form gratiâ Dei, gradually branched out into luxurious circumlocutions and periphrastic expressions in the Saxon period, such as, for example, "disponente domino," "gratia gratuita dei patris concedente," "domino concedente," "divinæ dispensationis gratia," "ejus [dei] melliflua gratia largiente," "ejus præclara gratia concedente," "favente dei omnipotentis clementia," "regnante domino," "Christo largiente," "dei dono," "Christi annuente clementia," "divina dispensatione," "patientia divina," "divina dispensante gratia," "domino donante," "divino suffragio," "divina inspirante gratia," "deo prædestinante," "dei prædestinatione," "deo cuncta pie disponente in cujus manu sunt omnia jura regnorum absque ulla antecedente merito," "cælica fulciete clemencia," "gratia gratuita dei patris concedente," "almi regnantis gratia," "divina dispensante pietate," "ipso piissimo præordinante deo," "mei non meriti sed dei gratia largiente," "omnipotentissimo deo concedente," "deo omnipotente donante et concedente," "favente omnipotentis dei clementia," "altithroni cuncta creantis ac gubernantis concedente clementia," "divina mihi arridente gratia," "disponente clementia creantis," "Dei omnipotentis nutu," "divina largiente clementia," "deificæ voluntatis permissione," etc.

For all such expressions, although for a time they obtained an employment with the diplomatic writers of the Norman period, were rapidly reduced again to the simple form from which they had started. And we find, for instance, the sole form dei gratiâ upon the seals and in the genuine charters of the two Williams and Henry the First; one charter, however, of a doubtful origin, of this latter sovereign, contains the phrase, "providente divina clementia" (Journ. of Brit. Arch. Assoc. 1873, vol. xxix. p. 250).

Confining, therefore, our attention to the words or expressions signifying rule or government, we are immediately struck with their variety and their import. For convenience, we will examine them in order of alphabetical arrangement. The first part comprises styles used previously to the advent of the Normans. The second part embraces the period between A.D. 1066 and the present year. It will be easily seen that some particular phrases have been frequently employed, while others have been found to occur once or twice only throughout the space of about 450 years which is illustrated by extant diplo-mata and official documents issued under the immediate surveillance of the chief ruler of our island. For convenience of reference, I have grouped the expressions which are found combined with basileus, imperator, monarchus, and rex, under the separate headings of basileus, etc., in alphabetical subordination. K. refers to Kemble's Codex. The italic word in the sentence is that which is arranged in alphabet.

PART I. A.D. 604–1066.

Beatus agonista totius Britanniae—used by Eadwi, in 956.

Anguleynincg—used in reference to Eadgar, in 969; in reference to Eadweard after 972, and in 977; in reference to Aethelred, between 978–992.

PART II. A.D. 1066–1879.

This second part, into which my notes naturally divide themselves, embraces a period of 814 years, nearly twice the space of time occupied and illustrated by the former part. But it will be seen that the royal styles and diplomatic titles affected by the sovereigns in this division arrive at a degree of harmony and intelligible adoption not in all cases shown by the first division. The sources from which the following notes have been extracted might have been diffuse, had not the very nature and essence of the inquiries demanded that my researches should be restricted to formal, original, and irrefragable evidence bearing in a direct manner upon these styles. Hence they are restricted to the evidence afforded by royal documents, coins, medals, and great seals; and the principal repertories, whence I have extracted my notes for this part following, are, the unrivalled collection of charters and seals in the British Museum; the chapter entitled 'Remarks on the Style and Charters of the Kings of England,' to be found in some editions only of 'The Chronology of History,' by Sir Harris Nicolas, itself derived in turn from Hardy's 'Introduction to the Charter-Rolls'; my own article on "Seals" in the Arts and Sciences Supplement of the English Cyclopædia; various Monographs on the Great Seals by Prof. Willis, the Rev. W. H. Gunner, and myself, in the Journals and Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, the British Archæological Association, and the Royal Archæological Institute; and Mr. H. W. Henfrey's 'Guide to the Study and Arrangement of English Coins' (which is, for this purpose, perhaps as useful as other numismatic works of greater calibre that are less easily procured by the general reader).

A variety of other works will naturally suggest themselves to those who read and study the history of England in its critical forms. This part of the notes necessarily arranges itself best under the chronological series of sovereigns; and premising that the sign (s.) signifies seal, and (c.) coins, and that other notes without references are from documentary sources, while, for the sake of brevity, constantly recurring words are abbreviated or indicated by their initial letters only, we commence with—

PART III.

In this concluding division¹ of the subject, I will endeavour to point out succinctly some of the most prominent of the many lessons that the previous extracts and notes appear to show us. I will only say, by way of preface, that I have spared no time or trouble to make my list as perfect as possible, although I can hardly hope to have gathered in every one of the numerous expressions which have been employed, for a period of 1275 years, to denote sovereignty of rule within the area of England.

If readers will refer to the list of expressions in Part I., they will observe that several words for sovereign ruler have been only used on one occasion, and to suit the taste of some individual monarch; and these hapaxlegomena divide themselves into two classes, the one of pure Latin origin, the other of Greek extraction. The Latin forms are coregulus and dominus; the Greek are agonista, fylos for φύλαξ, or perhaps for φίλος, and monarches. We may, therefore, dismiss these from our minds, as words unlikely ever to have been of any great value towards expressing the sovereign power over the kingdom of Britain. Brytenwalda, a purely English word, signifying "Britain's wielder," or "the Britons' wielder," i.e. "he who wields, or sways, the supreme power in Britain," also occurs but once in a diplomatic document, as far as my researches go (and that I find used by King Æthelstan in A.D. 934), although we recognize therein the more familiar expression Bretwalda, or Brihtwalda, into the consideration of which it is not my intention to digress on this occasion.

Readers will also observe another class of words, which, from their use on more than one occasion, and by different monarchs, appear to imply a certain amount of acceptance and authoritative employment, during this pre-Norman period. And these, in like manner, divide themselves into Latin and Greek forms. For example, among Latin forms there are curagulus, gubernator, imperator, primicerius, propugnator, rector, regulus (but only in a subordinate sense), and subregulus (also in a subordinate form). The words of Greek origin, which enter into this category, are archons, basileus, and monarchus.

Of these expressions, gubernator occurs either alone, in combination with a genitive case, such as gentis or insulæ, or with another noun, such as rex, rector, etc., in between fifty and sixty documents. The word itself appears to have been selected by the scribes and advisers of the royal court merely as a synonym of king or governor, ruler of the land, for the educated Saxon scribe loved circumlocutions, periphrastic expressions, and metaphorical diction quite as much as his modern representative, the learned man of the nineteenth century. The reader may with profit compare the charter K. MCI., commencing "Afflante per cunctam triquadri orbis latitudinem gibbonifero sacrosancti flaminis incendio," etc., dated in 928; or that numbered MCVII., dated in 923, beginning "Flebilia fortiter detestanda totillantis sæculi piacula," etc., with his own acquaintance with purer Latin styles.

The term curagulus, which appears to be a form of "curam gerulus" or "curam gerens" (although it very much resembles the word "coregulus," which has quite a different signification), occurs eight times, in combination with the more sublime title of basileus or rex.

The expression primicerius, or primichorius, appears once by itself, once in conjunction with monarchus, and twenty-six times in combination with rex. The signification of the word is not difficult of discovery, the latter part of the word probably being little more than a mere termination.

Propugnator, an expressive word, and full of meaning and value in the days of its employment, occurs in close combination with breotonum, or paganorum, twice, and then only in the secondary clauses of an elaborated style.

Rector occurs in the phrase "Rector et imperator" once; as "Gubernator et rector," ten times; as "Rex, gubernator, et rector," between thirty and forty times. Its meaning was evidently almost synonymous with rex.

Regulus appears about five times, and subregulus about six times, and are employed by local potentates, and not by those having entire government in the kingdom. These words appear mostly with the Hwiccas, or inhabitants of that tract of land generally identified with Worcestershire.

By far the most interesting word in the series to us all is imperator, and, from its frequent occurrence in formal documents, there can be no doubt that the use of this term was universally acknowledged and thoroughly understood, as well by the sovereigns who employed it as by the people who accepted its adoption. It appears used alone, or in combination with rex, rector, gubernator, propugnator, basileus, dominus; hence its signification was comprehensive and perhaps as sublime as that of any word in the whole list I have collected. It appears also in such phrases as “imperator regum,” “Breotonum ceterarumque provinciarum imperator,” “paganorum imperator,” “totius insulæ,” or “totius Albionis imperator,” etc. In all, there are between twenty and thirty examples of the use of the word by Coenwulf, Oswald, Æthelstan, Eadred, Eadwig, Eadgar, Æthelred, and Cnut during years ranging between 798 and 1018. Curiously enough, Du Cange says (see the passage I have quoted in the paragraph devoted to this title) that the Anglo-Saxon kings laid claim to the title of emperor because they made use of the term basileus, a word which at that time signified the same as imperator; but that writer does not seem to have noticed that the actual word imperator had ever been used. The primary use of the word was probably suggested by Roman intercourse. One king, at least, adopted the constantly recurring Roman style Imperator Augustus.

The Greek word ἀρχων, in its Saxonized form archons, occurs three times in absolute use, and no doubt is the equivalent of rector, or, perhaps, rex.

Monarchus, another Greek term, occurs from twenty to thirty times used singly, and in the phrases “rex et monarchus” twice, “regius monarchus,” “basileus monarchus,” “monarchus et primicerius,” once each. Monarcha, another form of the same word, occurs twice. This word monarchus is used for emperor by Theognis, Æschylus, Herodotus, Thucydides, and Isocrates, according to Yonge.

Basileus (which is not the translation of rex in middle-age Latin, as it was in older and classical ages, but of imperator) is apparently as favourite and as important a word as any in the whole series. This value of basileus is shown by the phrase "Rex et basileus totius Angliæ." The middle-age Greek equivalent to rex was merely a transliteration of the word into 'Ρῆξ. This word basileus occurs very frequently throughout the period embraced in Part I.—from fifty to sixty times simply, as well as many times in combination with the expressions gubernator, rector, monarchus, imperator, curagulus, and rex, the employment of such phrases as "basileus et imperator" being, of course, a mere repetition. It is worth while to remember that tyrannus, autocrator, hegemon, and other Greek words were not used by the Saxons.

When we take into consideration the frequency of the use of the word imperator, and its corresponding synonym basileus, I think we cannot deny that England, up to the time of the coming of the Normans, was not only a kingdom, but an empire, governed by a monarch who, while never losing sight of the words rex and regnum, yet possessed and very generally exercised his title to the word imperator, and designated his territories by the term imperium. Why William the First abandoned these titles, with one exception only of the use of basileus in a doubtful document, and persistently adhered to rex, a practice in which all his successors except James I. imitated him, I do not pretend to determine. If, as some assert, an imperium is a possession acquired and governed by the sword, but a regnum by inheritance and right and goodwill, then surely William would have used imperator and imperium in their most critically correct significations, unless, indeed, he desired to emphasize his contention that he succeeded to the throne of England by inheritance and not by conquest. by this use of the title rex. But it may be that this king never looked upon England as much better than a province added on to his own primary possession of the Duchy of Normandy: its greater extent being counterbalanced by its unsettled and unsatisfactory condition.

The remaining words, terms, and phrases of which my list is composed explain themselves, and appear to require little comment; some are merely fulsome and adulatory, others tautological and periphrastic, some explanatory and descriptive, others epithetic and unique. The adjective forms applied to the more important substantive nouns are beatus, egregius, industrius, rather a favourite word; famosus, augustus, serenissimus, clementissimus, gloriosus, gloriosissimus, gratulabundus, humilis, devotus, inclitus, imperiosus, justus, benignus, pacificus, pius, piissimus, præcellentissimus, terrenus, reverentissimus, strenuissimus, subthronizatus, and vocitatus. Perhaps these expressions correspond to the modern employment of the words Most Gracious, applied to the sovereigns of England, just as Most Christian, Most Faithful, etc., are appropriated to European sovereigns.

A consideration of the remaining phrases and words which I have not here touched upon must be relegated to a future occasion, lest I encroach too much upon the space here allowed me. There is, however, one peculiar phase of the history of the first use of the term "Great Britain" which must be mentioned before I conclude these notes on the styles and titles of English sovereigns. "Rex Anglorum" appears to be the form from William the First to Richard the First; "Rex Angliæ" commences with Henry the Second, and at first is used side by side with the previous form, but gradually supplants it, yielding in its turn on the death of Mary the Second, in 1695. But the employment of the term, "Magnæ Britanniae, etc., rex," was not so uniformly persisted in when it first arose, for Charles the First adopts the words on his first great seal, which was only in use for the year 1626-1627; he then reverts to "Angliæ, etc., rex" until 1640, when he resumes the expression, "Magnæ Britanniae," etc. Oliver does not use the term, Richard equally avoids or ignores it. Charles the Second, however, reverts to the practice first begun by his father. Yet William the Third and Mary the Second bear the older style on their seal, the newer one on their coins. William the Third's new great seal, after the death of Queen Mary, adopts "Magnæ Britanniae," and from that time forwards "Angliæ," etc., are discarded. The present style, "Britanniarum," etc., dates from 1801, the union with Ireland.

One remarkable instance of a revival is presented by a great seal, of which an impression exists in the British Museum, where George the Third, late in his reign, adds, after defensor, the words “et in terra ecclesiæ Anglicanæ et Hibernicæ supremum caput,” a title first used by Henry the Eighth, and not continued beyond Mary the First. We must, in like manner, consider the employment of the term imperatrix in connexion with Her Majesty the Queen more in the light of a resumption of a well-established Saxon usage—which perhaps inspired the unique title of “Totius Insulæ Britannicæ imperator” employed on the medal of James I.—than, as some will have it, in the light of a novelty without a precedent; for my notes and references indicate that it is a great archæological fact, and remove it altogether from a political expression.

3. — INDEXES OF PORTRAITS IN THE "EUROPEAN MAGAZINE," "LONDON MAGAZINE," AND "REGISTER OF THE TIMES." By EDWARD SOLLY, F.R.S.

Most of the old sets of Magazines contain portraits of contemporary celebrities, which, although of great interest, are almost unknown. Mr. Solly has made a beginning by indexing three of these Magazines, and we are desirous of obtaining and printing others, with the ultimate object of making a general index of engraved portraits. The value of such indexes is apparent, and I shall be glad to receive others made on the same system, from those who are ready to follow Mr. Solly's example, and are willing to enrich the publications of the Index Society.

4.—INDEX OF OBITUARY NOTICES FOR THE YEAR 1878.

THE need of an Annual Obituary is universally felt, and it is hoped that the following Index to notices of deaths in The Times, Athenæum, Academy, Nature, Builder, and other periodicals will be found useful. As the dates of birth and death are given in all cases where they could be obtained, the Index can often be used for purposes of reference even when it is not necessary to refer to the original sources.

This Index is an experiment, and in subsequent years it will probably be made more full and complete. The Secretary will, therefore, be glad to receive any suggestions for improvement and offers of help. It would be valuable if notices in local newspapers were included, but these can only be obtained by voluntary assistance.

Those entries to which a star is affixed are taken from a full list of the deaths in 1878, printed in The Times in January, 1879.
